About Jacy …

Jacy is the owner and lead trainer for Canine Copilots, LLC. Jacy has nearly 20 years of experience working and training dogs. Jacy was a Military Working Dog Handler in the United States Air Force, a Contract Dog Handler for numerous Federal Agencies, and now works primarily with companion dogs.

In 2010, Jacy became the first Certified K-9 Nose Work instructor in the Mid-Atlantic region and had classes in both Maryland and Virginia. Jacy has instructed at K-9 Nose Work® Camps, is a Certifying Official for NACSW® official trials and is a judge for these trials as well. Jacy has also assisted other trainers in their pursuit of building and developing their own Nose Work programs.

Foundation skills are the cornerstone of any nose work search. These skills are built early and should be practiced throughout the nose work career. While performing CO duties and conducting training at camps and workshops Jacy has noticed the fail points of searches are usually caused by lack of strong foundation skills that have eroded throughout the team's competition career. Jacy believes that this is due to all the fun searches that are being done to prepare for the trial experience.

The human feels that their dog will only like doing the big fun searches and they will get bored with the foundation classes. This is not the case for the dogs. Their primary motivation for finding source is not the fun search it is the fun at the end of it. Jacy started a class designed for the most advanced teams in the Canine Copilots family and focused only on the foundation skills. One of those teams went on to win the 2017 National NACSW Invitational as well as another team that participated.

Foundation for Superstars is a workshop designed to enforce the value of continued foundation training and to show the humans that foundation work can be fun.
